railroad as chief engineer and afterward as general manager that railroad was almost entirely rebuilt.

While the congressional committee on interstate and foreign commerce was on the isthmus recently in company with Judge Taft, Engineer Wallace explained to members of the committee the results of the study he has thus far given the canal problems. He presented estimates of the cost of the work and the time required for its construction according to four different plans. According to the plan which Engineer Wallace appeared to favor most, that of a sea level canal, it will cost $300,000,000 and require twenty years for construction, though it could be open for traffic in fifteen years' time. There are many advantages in favor of a sea level canal. It is urged that, though more expensive to construct, it would be more economical these majestic birds. Twelve wou of operation when completed. For a ninety foot level canal the estimated cost is $200,000,000. Between these extremes are the propositions for sixty foot and thirty foot levels, costing respectively $225,000,000 and $250,000,-

Already over 3,000 men are at work on the isthmus under the direction of the canal commission. Of these over 2,000 are laborers who receive 15 cents silver an hour.
